Cheaper to Keep Her

You have heard it before, "it's cheaper to keep her." And, you probably heard it when some big-time athlete or entertainer was facing divorce. It's not just stars who deal with it. In the case of my play, Cheaper to Keep Her, it is the real-life story of my script collaborator, Renee Rivon.

Seemingly overnight, your mate wakes up and says, "it's not you, it's me"; "our relationship has changed"; "I just don't feel the same anymore." You're left confused and maybe more than a little bit angry. Bottom line, they want out of the relationship leaving you wondering when things turned so wrong. Many times, the real reason your man or woman wants out is because the grass looks greener with someone else, so they think.

Cheaper to Keep Her humorously sheds light on a serious topic. What do you do when your relationship loses its luster. While that grass may look greener, you have to decide if it is really worth the price of losing your emotional and financial investment. Because it might be some really expensive artificial turf!

I hope Cheaper to Keep Her encourages our fans to have increased appreciation for that man or woman who has been down with them through it all. I cannot wait to see what you think of the story. Most of us can relate to being on one side of the issue or the other. Whether you're the faithful person in the relationship thinking all is well, the restless spouse looking for more excitement in another partner, or the skeptical single warding off commitment to avoid becoming the faithful person thinking all is well, my hope is that you'll find a bit of yourself in the story and maybe even find a solution if you are at a crossroads.

And because so many people are dealing with relationship issues, my new book seeks to give readers some insight and advice based on my personal experiences and the experiences of my many survey respondents. I'm a Good Man, You're a Good Woman ...

Why Can't We Find Each Other sheds light on the obstacles keeping good people apart and gives solutions to make relationships strong and long lasting.

Now, I'm no expert. I'm not a psychologist or relationship counselor. But, I have had my share of experiences and I am a keen observer of everything around me. And as the die-hard romantic you all know I am, there's nothing better than finding the right person to share your life with.

As always, my goal is to entertain, enlighten and inspire. Catch the play, Cheaper to Keep Her, when it comes to your city. And get your copy of my book, I'm a Good Man, You're a Good Woman ... Why Can't We Find Each Other, available for order on JeCaryousJohnson.com. I eagerly anticipate your feedback.

Until next time, keep praying, keep loving, keep living, keep playing!

Warmly,

Je'Caryous
